Margaret Galiardi is a Dominican Sister of Amityville, New York. For years she has been engaged in focusing on how the inner consciousness of humans creates global imbalance. This centers her work on an Earth-based Eco-Spirituality. She offers lectures, retreats and workshops nationally on such topics as “The New Cosmology,” “The Universe Story and The Christian Story,” and “Earth Spirit and You: A Spirituality for the 21st Century.” She has guided Vision Quests for adults and college-age youth.

Margaret has served on the staff of Siena Spirituality Center and Sophia Garden and Learning Center, both on Long Island. She has served as consultant to the Florida-based Center for Earth Jurisprudence.

Margaret has recently returned from spending a year with the Trappistine monks in the wilderness at Redwoods Monastery on the Lost Coast of Northern California. Of this experience Margaret notes, “the life of prayer, silence, manual labor and solitude of the monks in which I shared, the enormity of the Redwoods, the wildness of the forest beings and the spaciousness of the land has convicted me of a Love beyond measure, holding both this immense Universe and the life of each of us.”
