Kuklick Steps Down as Athletic Director; Stiles Signs On; deMarteleire New Coach of Women's Basketball; Mocarsky Will Guide Women's Soccer; Kerr New Volleyball Coach

After twenty-seven years as an athletics administrator and fourteen years as athletic director, Janice Rensimer Kuklick has passed the baton to Bill Stiles. Stiles comes to Chestnut Hill College from Ursinus College, where he served as the director of sports information and the assistant director of athletics since 1999.

Kuklick came to Chestnut Hill in 1977 on the heels of a spectacular amateur career as a lacrosse player, playing on undefeated teams at both Plymouth Whitemarsh High School and West Chester University. A member of the 1975 U.S. Women's Lacrosse Team, she

Amazing Grace

Alum Director Retires After 25 Years

by Anne Vey Stewart

It's the end of an era. For twenty-five years, the name of Grace Corr Haenn has meant Chestnut Hill's Office of Alumnae/i Affairs. Now she's bowing out as director and allowing herself some hard-earned leisure time. It's been a remarkable journey.

A Philadelphia native, Grace grew up in a large family on Boyer Street in Mt. Airy and attended Little Flower High School. With the particular encouragement of her father, the son of Irish immigrants, she became "the first girl in the family to get a college education."

She chose to attend Chestnut Hill and graduated in 1954 with a degree in music and education. After teaching in the Philadelphia public school system, like many women of the traditional fifties, Grace put her career on hold when she married and started her family.

Then, between 1956 (this is where the "amazing" first comes in) and 1971, she had eleven children, including a set of triplets. The first ten babies were girls, the eleventh a boy. She carved out time for herself between 2 and 3 p.m., when the younger children were napping and the older ones were not yet home from school, and sat down to enjoy a cup of hot tea while she read. Grace had also begun to contribute time in the Del-Mo (Delaware-Montgomery counties) chapter of the Alumnae Association. She explained that then, geographically based clubs ran social events and gatherings in their area, including Philadelphia, New Jersey, and Delaware. She was a volunteer director of the annual fund campaign, and became the 15th president of the Alumnae Association, serving from 1977 to 1978. By 1979, Grace was sharing time with Jane Wilson Dunne '50 as co-director of the Alumnae Association and the Annual Fund, then called the Alumnae Fund. Grace Corr Haenn became the full-time alumnae affairs director in 1980, hired by College president Mary Xavier Kirby, SSJ, Ph.D. shortly before Matthew Anita MacDonald, SSJ, Ph.D., became the fifth College president.

As a woman who had mothered eleven children, Grace's multi-tasking skills and gregarious nature were great assets when she moved from alumnae association volunteer to director. She notes that in 1980, the office consisted of herself, a secretary and two volunteer recorders of gifts. It was also a completely manual operation – all the alumnae mailings were done by hand, and the envelopes were produced with the assistance of addressograph plates—"the noisiest thing you've ever heard." She adds that fortunately there were a lot fewer graduates at that time, because there were no graduate or ACCELERATED programs. The primary job of the office, Grace explains, was to support the local clubs and put together reunion weekends. In 1982, all that

New Majors Offered

This fall, the School of Undergraduate Studies and the School of Continuing Studies will each offer two new programs. “Chestnut Hill College is committed to academic excellence,” said Carol Jean Vale, SSJ. “We are constantly looking to add courses and degree programs that will provide the greatest educational and financial benefits to our students.”

The School of Undergraduate Studies will offer:

Bachelor of Science in Human Services – This degree program is an expansion of the existing Human Services concentration currently offered in the Sociology Department. The Human Services program is based on competency standards established by the Council for Standards in Human Service Education (CSHSE), the only national organization providing standards for human service training.

Bachelor of Science in Criminal Justice – In response to student requests for a Criminal Justice major, Chestnut Hill College is expanding its existing concentration. Unlike many Philadelphia area programs, the College will place a strong emphasis on juvenile justice with the addition of new courses such as “Child Welfare” and “Juvenile Delinquency.”

The School of Continuing Studies will add:

Bachelor of Science in Elementary Education (K-6) with Certification, in an ACCELERATED format – This program, which is approved by the Pennsylvania Department of Education (PDE), combines a sound liberal arts background with specific training in educational and child psychology, in curriculum methods and materials, and in extensive fieldwork. Chestnut Hill College is the only college in Philadelphia to offer the degree in an ACCELERATED format, which delivers courses in a continuous eight-week format during the evening and on weekends, giving students the opportunity to earn their degree in fewer than four years. Once all coursework has been completed, including student teaching and testing, the student will be able to apply for the Pennsylvania Instructional I Certificate.

Combined Bachelor of Arts in Human Services and Master of Science in Administration of Human Services – This combined program provides an opportunity for Human Services majors in the School of Continuing Studies to complete an M.S. in Administration of Human Services in the School of Graduate Studies. Students enrolled in the program will benefit financially because of a reduced number of required courses and selected graduate courses being offered at undergraduate tuition rates. The program includes 120 undergraduate credits and 33 graduate credits, which can be earned in an ACCELERATED format, allowing for students to complete their master’s degree in approximately two years. For more information on all new programs, please call 215.248.7001

Other Transitions

Associate Dean and Registrar Donna Erb, M.S., has departed the College after nearly fifteen years to take a managerial position in the College of General Studies at the University of Pennsylvania. Erb was honored in 2003 with the first Distinguished Service Award voted to a College employee. Dr. William T. Walker, vice president for academic affairs, says of Erb, "She has exemplified a high level of professionalism in all of her work at the College, and she will be missed as a colleague and as a good friend to many of us."

Psychology Department Faculty Housed in New DeSales Center

The psychology department professors have relocated their offices into a new centralized space in a refurbished building behind the Medaille Center, which will be known as the DeSales Center. It has been named in honor of the late Helen DeSales, SSJ, Ph.D., longtime professor of psychology and chair of the psychology department at the College.

The DeSales Center now houses 12 faculty members who teach at all levels of the College's psychology program: undergraduate, master's, and the doctoral program in clinical psychology. Faculty telephone numbers remain the same.

Christine P. Nydick, M.S., associate dean of the School of Continuing Studies, retired from her full-time duties at the end of the 2003-04 academic year. Nydick joined the College in 1991 as assistant to the director of the continuing education division. In 1996, she moved to the newly created ACCELERATED division and subsequently became associate dean in 2000. Nydick will remain at the College on a part-time basis as coordinator for academic advising.

has been inducted into both the Pennsylvania and National Hall of Fame of the U.S. Women's Lacrosse Association.

Kuklick, renowned for her boundless energy and enthusiasm in coaching and teaching, received the Christian and Mary Lindback Award for Distinguished Teaching in 1990. She will remain at the College as an assistant professor of physical education and chair of the physical education department while enjoying more free time with her now-retired husband and two college-age sons.

As an underclassman at Ursinus, Bill Stiles was an All-Conference and All-American catcher in baseball. Following graduation, he earned a master's degree from Temple University and took a post as assistant director of athletics at Chowan College in North Carolina. He returned to his alma mater as assistant athletic director in 1999. Stiles says, "The biggest thing I learned at Ursinus is where athletics fit in the academic mission of the college. Ursinus holds that we want to be successful in athletics, but we don't want to compromise the academic integrity of the college to be successful. And that's what I am going to take with me to Chestnut Hill. I want the athletic department to just be one piece of a whole education."

New Athletic Director
Bill Stiles

Stiles will take charge of a greatly expanded athletic program that now includes thirteen intercollegiate varsity teams. Four men's sports and two new women's teams will be added to the upcoming school year's athletic schedule. The men's soccer team, which competed at the club level in 2003, will join the North Eastern Athletic Conference (NEAC), as will the men's tennis, golf and cross-country teams. A women's golf and cross-country team also will compete in the NEAC for the first time.

Jackie deMarteleire will lead women's basketball as the Griffins follow their hoop dreams into the new season. She is a graduate of Lansdale Catholic High School and Philadelphia University, where she played small forward and two-guard and was named to the all-tournament team in the New York Collegiate Athletic Conference her senior year. deMarteleire also recently earned an M.B.A. from Philadelphia University, where she served as the assistant coach of the women's basketball team. She comes from a family of coaches (grandfather, father, two uncles, and three aunts) and embraces the challenge of helping to shape a young team that will include six sophomores and at least two incoming first-year players.

Michelle Mocarsky advances to head women's soccer coach this fall after contributing last season as assistant coach to a first-year team that captured the Atlantic Women's College Conference (AWCC) title and advanced to the NCAA championships. Former head coach Shawn Ferris is assuming duties as head coach of the first men's soccer team. Mocarsky, who is also the payroll and benefits coordinator at the College, brings more than 15 years playing experience and extensive coaching experience to the team, serving as assistant coach at her alma mater, Arcadia University, before joining the Chestnut Hill College coaching staff.

Matt Kerr will take over the reins of the women's volleyball team. He has been the assistant coach of Temple's women's volleyball team since 2001. During that time, the team won an Atlantic 10 championship and advanced to the Sweet Sixteen round of the NCAA Division I Tournament. Kerr was a member of the Penn State Abington men's volleyball team and the Temple University men's volleyball club.

Farewell, Sister Louise

As a graduate student in applied technology, you would spend hours at the College, struggling to master web page development and theories of learning and video production, and most of all, to find the “core value” hidden in your research data.

But on all those late weekday evenings and drowsy Saturday mornings, you were not alone in your work. You would likely encounter a tall slender figure, clad in an oversized cardigan, hurrying down the wide stairway of St. Joseph Hall with a fistful of keys in her hand and purpose in her step, on her way to open a computer lab or to meet a student. It is Louise Mayock, SND, Ed. D., whose vision and resolve have shaped the College’s technology program for almost twenty years. Now she has discerned that her work here is done, and she is moving on to other missions.

Louise Mayock is a member of the French order of the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur, whose mission is to make known God’s goodness, often through a strong educational tradition. The “SNDs” wear a Greek-inspired cross of four arms all of the same length—a symbol that resembles the “plus” sign in mathematics. Indeed, math is Mayock’s favorite subject and was her major at Trinity College. (She has said that she does math problems as mental warm-ups.) Her education includes a Masters in Theological Studies from Catholic University and a Doctorate in Education from the University of Pennsylvania, where she also taught.

Sister Louise came to the College from Penn in 1985, and served as director of academic computing, as an instructor in communications and technology, and in her most influential role, as chair of the graduate program in applied technology. She was instrumental in devising a dynamic curriculum with technology specializations in instructional design, leadership, education, and reading.

Her academic contribution has been immeasurable, but her personal gift is surpassing: she has shepherded a generation of students through the program by means of coaxing, cajoling, charm, and coercion. Thank you, Sister Louise, for your tenacity. — AVS

Barbara D’Iorio Martino ’60 Receives Alumnae/i Association Egan Award

The 2004 Eleanore Dolan Egan ’28 Award for Outstanding Service to Chestnut Hill College was presented to Barbara D’Iorio Martino ’60 at Reunion Weekend. In the forty-odd years since her graduation, Martino has been a loyal and energetic participant in alumnae/i activities, beginning with the Del-Mo Club alumnae chapter. Says classmate Eileen Long Hessman, “No task within that club was too small or too large for her. She would sell chances, arrange flowers, set up tables. She would get patrons. Barbara participated, contributed, and led at most Del-Mo functions for over twenty years.” Martino then held several officer positions on the Alumna/i Association’s Board of Directors before serving as its president from 1982-84 and as a Director-at-Large thereafter. Invited to join the College’s Board of Directors in 1988, she guided the first Capital Campaign to $5.5 million in gifts. As a tribute to his wife, Rocky Martino donated $2.5 million to the College, and the Capital Gifts Initiative I goal to construct a new building was realized with the dedication of Martino Hall in October 2000. Perhaps Marianne Sewell ’61 summed it up best when she nominated Barbara for the Egan Award by writing, “I don’t know anyone who has done more for CHC than Barbara. I think of her as ‘Miss CHC Alumna’.”

The Egan Award is named in memory of the first president of the Alumnae Association, who was a member of the College’s first graduating class and who founded the Alumnae Association in 1929.

College Hosts First Art Auction

Auction chairperson Catherine Lockyer Biting ’92 welcomed alumnae/i and guests to an evening of lively bidding on “something for everyone” — watercolors, oils, etchings, lithographs, documented sports memorabilia, and even estate jewelry.

At the preview on May 15 in Sorgenti Arena, guests browse the selection of more than 150 custom-framed and matted works of art provided by Ross Galleries of New York for the College’s first Art Auction benefit.

*A Few Words From the Alumnae/i Association President...IF NOT US, THEN WHO?

What an honor it is for me to assume the role of President of the Chestnut Hill College Alumnae/i Association! Like many of you, I am passionate about our alma mater.

And why shouldn't I be? After all, I am one of 13 in my family to graduate from Chestnut Hill. When my late aunt, Mother Lillian Teresa McClain, SSJ, earned her undergraduate degree in 1935, she began a family tradition that continues to the present day. My daughter, Julie, is a senior this year and will become "Number 14" in May '05. Passionate about Chestnut Hill? You bet I am!

During my two-year tenure as president, I hope my enthusiasm for our College is infectious. One goal of my term is to increase the number of our alums who are actively involved with the College. It is so energizing, rewarding, and fun to volunteer for something at the College through the Association.

Because I believe that people like to be "called by name" to volunteer, I invite you to contact me and I promise to match your skills and interests to a volunteer need. To facilitate that, I have set up a new e-mail address for you: CHCALUMPRES@aol.com. Write or call me at home at 610-539-5020 and I will call you by name to volunteer.

Another goal during my tenure is to increase annual giving by our alumnae/i. Our gratitude for the education we received must be reflected by our financial support. Only 29% of our alums support the Annual Fund appeal and I don't think that really reflects how our graduates feel about their alma mater. I believe that part of the problem is that for many, many years, our College never asked for money so we thought it didn't need any help.

To a large extent, that's due to the magnanimous support from the Sisters of Saint Joseph, whose members held almost all administrative posts and a majority of faculty positions without pay for many decades. The investment that those dedicated people made in us needs to be repaid by us now. If we don't support our College, who should? It's up to us to guarantee that Chestnut Hill College continues to graduate well-educated and cultured women and men who are equipped to succeed in every role in today's society. If not us, then who?

To these two goals I pledge my energy, my enthusiasm, my experience for Chestnut Hill during the next two years. I ask you to join me in becoming an active steward of Chestnut Hill College. Your time, talent, and treasure are all needed. I invite you – and call you by name – to join us in this good work. We'll have some fun along the way, too.

"It's pay back time"

Suzanne K. Dufrasne '58 (right) provided a generous surprise to the College when she signed over her six-figure life insurance policy to Chestnut Hill, saying, "It's pay back time." Dufrasne noted that the Sisters of Saint Joseph had provided her with a full scholarship to Cecelian Academy and a half scholarship to the College. And, with the aid of professor Sister Patrick Marie, Dufrasne got a job at Rohm & Haas, where she worked for 29 years. She said her gift is really in memory of Sister Patrick Marie. President Carol Jean Vale, SSJ, Ph.D., (left) gratefully acknowledged the extraordinary gift and noted that the policy's value would grow considerably over the years.

Lorraine Aurely, vice president of institutional advancement, said, "Sue has been wonderfully generous for many years, providing volunteer service as well as monetary support. This donation is only the latest demonstration of her dedication. She has shown how careful and creative financial planning can result in a contribution that exceeds what a donor can ordinarily give."

changed. The office and its records were computerized, and it was sink or swim to learn the systems. Did they bring in a trainer to help? Grace replies, “No, they brought in a computer and showed me how to turn it on.” She is, amazingly, self-taught – “in spite of having been a fine arts major. Music and computers are both math-based, so maybe that helped.” She shrugs with typical aplomb, “I had to learn it. It was the way to generate mailing lists and keep track of alumnae.”

That same year, President Matthew Anita McDonald, SSJ, committed herself to expanding the office of alumnae/i affairs and increasing her own visibility as president at alumnae occasions. Grace organized and coordinated the first tour for a president to visit graduates in various cities across the country. In 1985, in preparation for the College’s first formal capital campaign, the fund-raising operations of the alumnae and development offices became the Office of Institutional Advancement, and included alumnae affairs, development, and public relations.

“Grace was instrumental in helping to achieve the successes of the Campaign for Chestnut Hill,” notes Lorraine Aurely ’71, vice president for institutional advancement. “When I came to work at the College in 1984, Grace was an incredible source of information. She introduced me to so many alums and friends of the College. As we moved to create the Office of Institutional Advancement and launch the Campaign, Grace was key to the efforts. She not only worked diligently to help communicate to the alums, but she also was our computer expert.”

“Before I joined the staff of the College, Grace’s name was familiar to me only through Alumnae Office communications. In the 20 years that we’ve worked together, we have become colleagues – and friends. Whether brainstorming about how to generate more support for CHC, dealing with the latest computer crisis, or sharing family anecdotes, I have come to value deeply our relationship. I will miss her talents in the alumnae/i office, but I am delighted that we’ll continue to benefit from her expertise and enthusiasm in the position of data manager.”

Grace is reflective about the changes in alumnae/i affairs over the decades. Reunion numbers, she offers, have always stayed pretty much the same, but in the last few years, it’s been harder to get younger alums to come out to events. It’s also harder and harder to get volunteers, because many women are no longer staying home. She observes simply: “Time marches on.”

What Grace will miss the most, she says, “is the interaction with the volunteers. These are women who care deeply about the College and who work hard for it. I have forged some wonderful friendships and have met graduates I would not ordinarily have had a chance to know because they span a lot of years.”

The retiring director of alumnae/i affairs isn’t ready to cut entirely her ties with the College. She will stay on part time in the newly created position of data manager for the Office of Institutional Advancement. Otherwise, she plans to use her new leisure time to get her house in order, spend more time with her eight cherished grandchildren, and tackle a long list of books she’s been meaning to read. There’s also the possibility of more visits to Eagle’s Mere, the mountain lake town in north central Pennsylvania where the family has been vacationing for years. Wherever she goes and whatever she does, we wish her amazing adventures.

Please join us as the Alumnae/i Association pays tribute to our “Amazing Grace” at a reception on Sunday, October 24, at 3:30 p.m. in the Social Room, Fournier Hall.

Mentors Needed

"It gave me an opportunity to take a closer look – more real and true to life – at what life just might be like for me."

"It was an eye-opening experience. I enjoyed the action – the movement of the employees accomplishing their goals."

"It helped me narrow my decision for the majors that I'm interested in. I'm currently undecided so this visit helped a lot."

The good news: our enrollment is increasing. The bad news: our alum-mentoring base is shrinking! President Carol Jean Vale, SSJ initiated the Career Connections Program twelve years ago in order to link alums with undergraduates, helping them along the path of career planning. Career Connections is designed as a one-day visit, so that the student can get a snapshot of a career. In some cases, an ongoing mentoring relationship just naturally develops. But as of this writing, we have only 28 alums who have agreed to a shadowing visit with a student in the coming academic year.

"It was the real deal!" said one student returning from her visit. Whether a student is an undeclared major or dedicated to a career path, the visit helps solidify short-term objectives in career planning.

Our mentoring base is not limited to alums – we welcome parents, spouses, sons, daughters, and friends! Please join our mission to link the world of learning with the world of work, and contact Career Services at 215-248-7109 or email Eileen Webb at webbe@chc.edu.

They Made the Connection: Fran Vorsky '05 (left) and Siobhan McEneny-Hayes, LMFT, '82 first met via their Career Connections visit 3 years ago, and continue to enjoy a mentoring relationship. Vorsky is enrolled in the College's five-year combined B.S./M.S. program in psychology, and McEneny-Hayes is an adjunct instructor in human services for the School of Continuing Studies.
