

Coming Soon to the Chestnut Hill Theater Near You!

Many a little girl, dazzled in a darkened theater by the roguish charm of Professor Harold Hill, vowed to become a librarian like the smitten Marian Paroo, and dance a ballet among Technicolor® stacks of books. Now the magic of The Music Man is coming to the Chestnut Hill College stage the first weekend in April. The music department production will feature senior music majors Katherine Reinoehl and Sheena Trainor starring as Marian for alternate performances, and community theater actor Gary Gilbert in the role of con man Harold Hill, who convinces the townspeople of River City, Iowa to invest in fictional musical instruments and band uniforms.

The Music Man will be staged Friday and Saturday evenings, April 2 and 3, at 8:00 p.m. and Sunday, April 4 at 2:00 p.m. in the College Auditorium. General admission is $10. For more information, call the music department at 215.248.7194.

Women's Soccer Captures AWCC Conference Title

The first-ever Chestnut Hill College women's soccer team made history, finishing its inaugural year with a 16-2-1 record under the cultivation of Coach Shawn Ferris and assisted by Michele Mocarsky. The young team, dominated by first-year students, produced three first-team all-conference selections, two second-team all-conference selections, and two "honorable mention" all-conference selections, including Conference Player of the Year and Rookie of the Year. Chestnut Hill went on to capture the Atlantic Women's Colleges Conference (AWCC) conference title and advanced to the NCAA tournament. The NCAA bid was the first in the College's history. During the season, the team also won the First Annual Chestnut Hill College Women's Soccer Tournament. Chestnut Hill finished 1st in the NCAA in Scoring Offense and 3rd in Won-Lost Percentage.

Annie Ruckdeschel '06, Maureen Dugan '07 and Donna Westfield '07 were all named to the AWCC Conference's First Team, with each finishing the season statistically ranked in the NCAA Top-30. Stephanie Williams '07 and Erin Bagdasarian '07 earned Second Team All-Conference honors. Morgan Nichols '07 and Meghan Smith '07 both earned conference honorable mentions.

Next year, Mocarsky will be head coach for the women's soccer team, and Ferris will take on coaching duties for the first-ever Chestnut Hill College men's soccer team.

Speaking Truth to Power: A Conversation with Dr. Marie Conn

By Anne Vey Stewart

The word “heart” ripples softly throughout a conversation with Marie Conn, Ph.D., professor of religious studies at Chestnut Hill College. It floats up when she describes her young students, with their “good hearts and a thirst for the truth,” it resurfaces when she admits to a “special place in her heart” for the sacraments class she teaches on “The Meaning of Death and Dying,” and of course there is her role as co-instructor for “Heart of the City,” the interdisciplinary seminar on urban poverty that intertwines sociology with religion. The course requirements include weekly service at Project H.O.M.E., a facility for the chronically homeless in Philadelphia’s Fairmount Park section. This past fall, Conn was able to tap homeless advocate Gerry Straub to speak to her class and the College at large about his documentary film work on “When Did I See You Hungry?,” the result of Straub’s eighteen months of living among the poor on five continents.

Incorporating experiential education into her teaching is something that Conn does often and well. She says there are no real textbooks for any of her courses. Grades for “Death and Dying,” for example, are not based on traditional term papers. Rather, the major accountability comes from projects that will educate the College community about the complexities that can surround dying – or any moral or biomedical issue. (This semester for example, the students in this class are being encouraged to shape a panel discussion for the campus on Terry Schiavo, the Florida woman in a persistent vegetative state whose family is battling over the right to remove her from life support.) Coursework includes a section on living wills and power of attorney. Students receive samples of the documents and are encouraged to talk with their families about their wishes.

Conn’s students have mounted a number of provocative bulletin boards in the College hallways. The Global Studies seminar pondered a way to demonstrate how every person in the community contributes to the mission — then photographed dozens of different pairs of hands at work on a typical day at the College to produce the panel, “Hands of CHC.”

Actions speak louder than words in Conn’s personal life too. She has sponsored numerous children over the years through “Save the Children.” Her “first child,” Mauricio, was born in El Salvador in 1980, the year that Cardinal Romero (a personal hero of Conn’s) was martyred in that country along with four female missionaries. Conn sponsored Mauricio until he turned eighteen, then lost contact with him. She explains that the children in the program cycle out as they finish school, and quietly adds, “It hurt my heart to lose him.”

Today she sponsors seven children in communities in New Mexico, El Salvador, Honduras, Mozambique and the Phillipines, saying emphatically, “If anyone ever questions whether [organizations like Save the Children] are on the level, I can assure them that every penny is stretched to the limit.” (One child is sponsored through Pearl S. Buck International, the organization which brought Conn’s youngest niece into their family.)

In 2001, Conn’s dynamic approach to making issues personally meaningful for her students brought her the College’s prestigious Lindback Foundation Award for distinguished teaching. It is but one of the dozens of awards, honors, and grants that she has garnered over the years. Along with physics professor Kathleen Duffy, SSJ, Ph.D., Conn was named a $100,000 book award finalist for the John Templeton Foundation for Science and Religion in 1999, and was nominated in 1998 for the Carnegie Foundation’s United States Professor of the Year Program.

Conn holds three masters degrees (in classical languages, religious education, and liturgical studies) and earned her doctorate in theology at the University of Notre Dame. Shortly thereafter, in 1992, Conn joined the faculty of Chestnut Hill College. Today, she is most passionate about healthcare issues and the lack of insurance for 44 million Americans. It is the subject she now speaks, teaches, and writes about the most, accepting any and all invitations to force political attention on the crisis. It is but one more way to live out the directive of her favorite bumper sticker: “Speak truth to power.”

College Hosts Leading Kennedy Scholar At November Conference

Robert Dallek, author of An Unfinished Life: John F. Kennedy, 1917-1963, was the keynote speaker for “The Kennedy Legacy,” a two-day conference held at the College on November 21 and 22, 2003. The conference, which was sponsored by the department of history and political science, offered “a forty-year perspective” on the Kennedy presidency with presentations by two-dozen scholars from the United States, Canada, and Israel.

Dallek, a professor of history at Boston University who is widely regarded as the finest Kennedy scholar today, was featured in several network television segments for specials on the fortieth anniversary of the Kennedy assassination.

Basketball Wrap-Up

Men's Basketball Team Takes a Bow

"Small but scrappy" is one way head coach Jessie Balcer has described his team, the first-ever men's hoopsters in the 79-year history of the College. The 29-year-old Balcer's tallest player is 6'5" Delton Morgan-Hines '07 from Strawberry Mansion High School; the shortest is Cardinal Dougherty's 5'10" guard Shawn Bolling '07, with the rest of the team standing somewhere in between. No matter – the guy Griffins are "quick and fun to watch." At mid-year the team was 3-6 overall, with six games left in the regular season. The team's December 6 home court debut featured President Carol Jean Vale, SSJ, Ph.D., performing the ceremonial tip-off honors.

Women's Basketball in Rebuilding Year

In January, the lady Griffins' record stood at 3-6, but coach Brian Morris points out that three of the losses were by two-point margins. He's charged with re-shaping a team that includes just one senior and one junior along with four sophomores and seven first-year students. Morris points out that the team has played "a very tough non-conference year" and predicts brighter days by the end of February.

The aroma of international flavors wafted through the Rotunda on Gourmet Day, another ongoing College tradition. Sponsored by the Mosaic of Cultures Club, the October 22 event featured ethnic foods from Africa, South America, and Europe, plus folk entertainment.

A Christmas Valentine from the Class of 2007

The College Dining Room is traditionally dressed for the holidays by the first-year students. This year, the College community found a tree festooned with lace and marble ornaments, along with this loving tribute to past and present, which was placed on every dining table.

"First-Year Christmas Cheer"

Written by Daina Haines '07

There once was a Sister,
as wise as can be

And her words helped to inspire this tree.

She spoke of this place, of marble
and lace

To prepare its young ladies with strength and with grace.

The seasons have changed and the years have passed by

But her words are still strong now
that we've guys.

A gift may it be,
our meaningful tree

That captures school spirit,
symbolically.

The energy of our class shines
through the white sparkle

The addition of men is in sachets of marble.

Each color that glistens is another personality

And the lace, the strong women,
is the foundation of our tree.

We extend our gracious thanks for the welcome we've received

And the warmest holiday wishes to our CHC family.

FACULTY DEATHS

Manucher Dareshuri, Ph.D., assistant professor of economics, died at home on December 10, 2003, following a long illness. Dr. Dareshuri had taught at the College since 1991, and served as chair of the business and economics department from 1998-2001. A native of Iran, he earned a B.A. in economics from Pahlavi University, Iran, and both his master's and doctorate in economics from the University of Massachusetts. The political upheavals in Iran impelled Dr. Dareshuri to move permanently to America with his family in the 1980s.

Professor Mary Helen Kashuba, SSJ, Ph.D., who co-taught courses with Dr. Dareshuri, remembers him as "...a man of peace who had survived a revolution, a man of justice who had seen oppression, a man of joy who had known suffering."

Dr. Dareshuri is survived by his wife, Naheed, and four grown children. The family suggests memorial contributions to the ALS Hope Foundation, PO Box 40777, Philadelphia, PA 19107.

Mary Jordan, SSJ, Ph.D., (Sister Ignatius) died at St. Joseph Villa in Flourtown on December 16, 2003. A native of Bayonne, New Jersey, she earned her B.S. in mathematics from Chestnut Hill College in 1957, and subsequently acquired both a master's and doctorate in mathematics from Catholic University of America, where she completed her studies in 1964. Sister Mary then served Chestnut Hill College as professor of mathematics from 1964 to 1991. Marilyn Ryan, SSJ, Ph.D., a former student of Sister Mary, says of her: "Her priorities were always evident. Mary made it very clear that as much as she loved math, her faith, spirituality, and religious life came first."

College to Host Art Auction

Whether you collect art or not, come watch the fun as a live auctioneer takes bids from the crowd at the College's first Art Auction on Saturday, May 15, in the Sorgenti Arena. The preview and reception will begin at 6 p.m. with the live auction starting at 7 p.m. Ross Galleries of New York will conduct the auction, which will feature more than 150 custom-framed and matted works of art; lithographs, etchings, serigraphs, animation cels, watercolors, original oils signed by the artists, documented sports memorabilia and estate jewelry. The majority of the art will have opening bids ranging from $35 to $300. These bids are generally less than traditional framed gallery prices.

The event is open to both alumnae/i and the public. The admission price includes refreshments throughout the auction, which is 7 to 9 p.m.

Chairperson for the event is Catherine Lockyer Bitting '92. For tickets or further information, please contact Catherine Quinn, Director of Development, at 215.248.7137 or e-mail her at quinnc@chc.edu.

Best-Selling Author Pat Conroy

Will Speak at Commencement 2004

Pat Conroy, author of the best-selling "Prince of Tides," "The Great Santini," and five other books, will address the College's 2004 graduating class on Saturday, May 8, 2004. Several of Conway's books have inspired major motion pictures. The "Prince of Tides," directed by Barbra Streisand, was nominated for a best-picture Oscar. "The Great Santini" and "The Lords of Discipline" also became box office hits. Conway's most recent works are "My Losing Season," a non-fiction report of his experiences as a member of the 1966-67 basketball team at the Citadel in South Carolina, and the novel, "Beach Music."

Annual Empty Bowl Dinner Raises $8,000 for Homeless

The 2003 Empty Bowl Dinner at Chestnut Hill College benefiting the Northwest Philadelphia Interfaith Hospitality Network (NPIHN) brought in nearly $8,000 from some 600 participants on November 20, where the dinner was set up in the Rotunda of St. Joseph Hall. The annual event, popular with families, has drawn increased numbers every year since its inception six years ago. Guests can select their own handmade ceramic bowl to fill with soups donated by area restaurants and caterers, then take the bowl home as a reminder of the hungry and homeless who may face an "empty bowl" every day.
